Forecast for Thursday 23 Jun 2022

Weather: Unbroken strong sunshine at first and quickly becoming very warm. Turning cloudier by midday with an increasing chance of heavy showers or thunderstorms developing during the afternoon and through the evening. These could give torrential downpours and hail in places.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 600m: Near 100%.

Low cloud and visibility: Despite thickening cloud and the chance for thunderstorms, summits are expected to remain free from cloud. Any heavy or thundery showers could bring some brief reductions in visibility however, with the generally very good views falling to moderate to poor.

Meteorologist's View

UV levels will be very high during the middle of the day and therefore good sun protection is recommended. Sudden downpours are possible during the afternoon with lightning and gusty winds possible additional hazards. Thin waterproof layers recommended, and be ready to descend off exposed and steep terrain during any thundery showers.
